The face of the future

We were so tickled when 16-year-old Dillon Nolt from Port Royal, Pa. walked up to the registration table at the show. Young Dillon had taken it upon himself to make the two-hour drive (alone) to see what the rebuilding industry was all about. His folks are "interested in the business" and he spent Saturday gathering information for possible family business opportunities. It's fresh-faced entrepreneurs like Dillon that validate our efforts to keep focused on the positive and to maintain a sunny outlook for our industry in the coming years.

South Dakota rancher meets Italian journalist from Ohio

Accomplished speaker and writer Dan Marinucci celebrated his birthday at the show on Sunday with a rousing chorus of "Happy Birthday" accompanied by rebuilder Tom Barrett on piano.
